A "costalero" (carrier) and his wife, a foreman, a "cantaor" (flamenco singer) and a family of Nazarenos are some of the anonymous people that lend us their unique and particular ways of seeing so we can walk beside them through the silent streets of Jerez. All through one night, they proudly weight on their shoulders the whole village tradition, faith, memory and folklore. ## JACK PIERCE, THE MAKER OF MONSTERS

TRAILER

In today's cinematic world of digital effects, telling what is real from what was created in a computer is impossible. But there was a time when Hollywood relied on nothing more than an artist's ability to create a boogie man with grease paint, cotton, glue, hair, and a few simple materials to draw people into the theater to be chilled and thrilled. When we think back to these talents of the silver screen most people think of "The Man of a Thousand Faces," Lon Chaney. But Universal Studios had its very own Phantom creating the world's most memorable creatures lurking in its substages. His amazing ability to create makeups that can still stand toe-to-toe with today's multimillion dollar effects is worth a closer look. Jack Pierce was the man who brought us Dracula, Frankenstein's Monster, The Mummy, The Wolfman, Bride of Frankenstein, and countless other monsters that have stood the test of time.
